Foreword

Tomorrow is inevitable. Through many todays – todays filled with development of mind, experiment of fact, achievement of many goals, the leadership of some and the enjoyment of all, tomorrow is built. The 1967-68 Breaker Staff hopes you will use the concepts and ideals of today as tools to build the many great tomorrows that you shall seek.

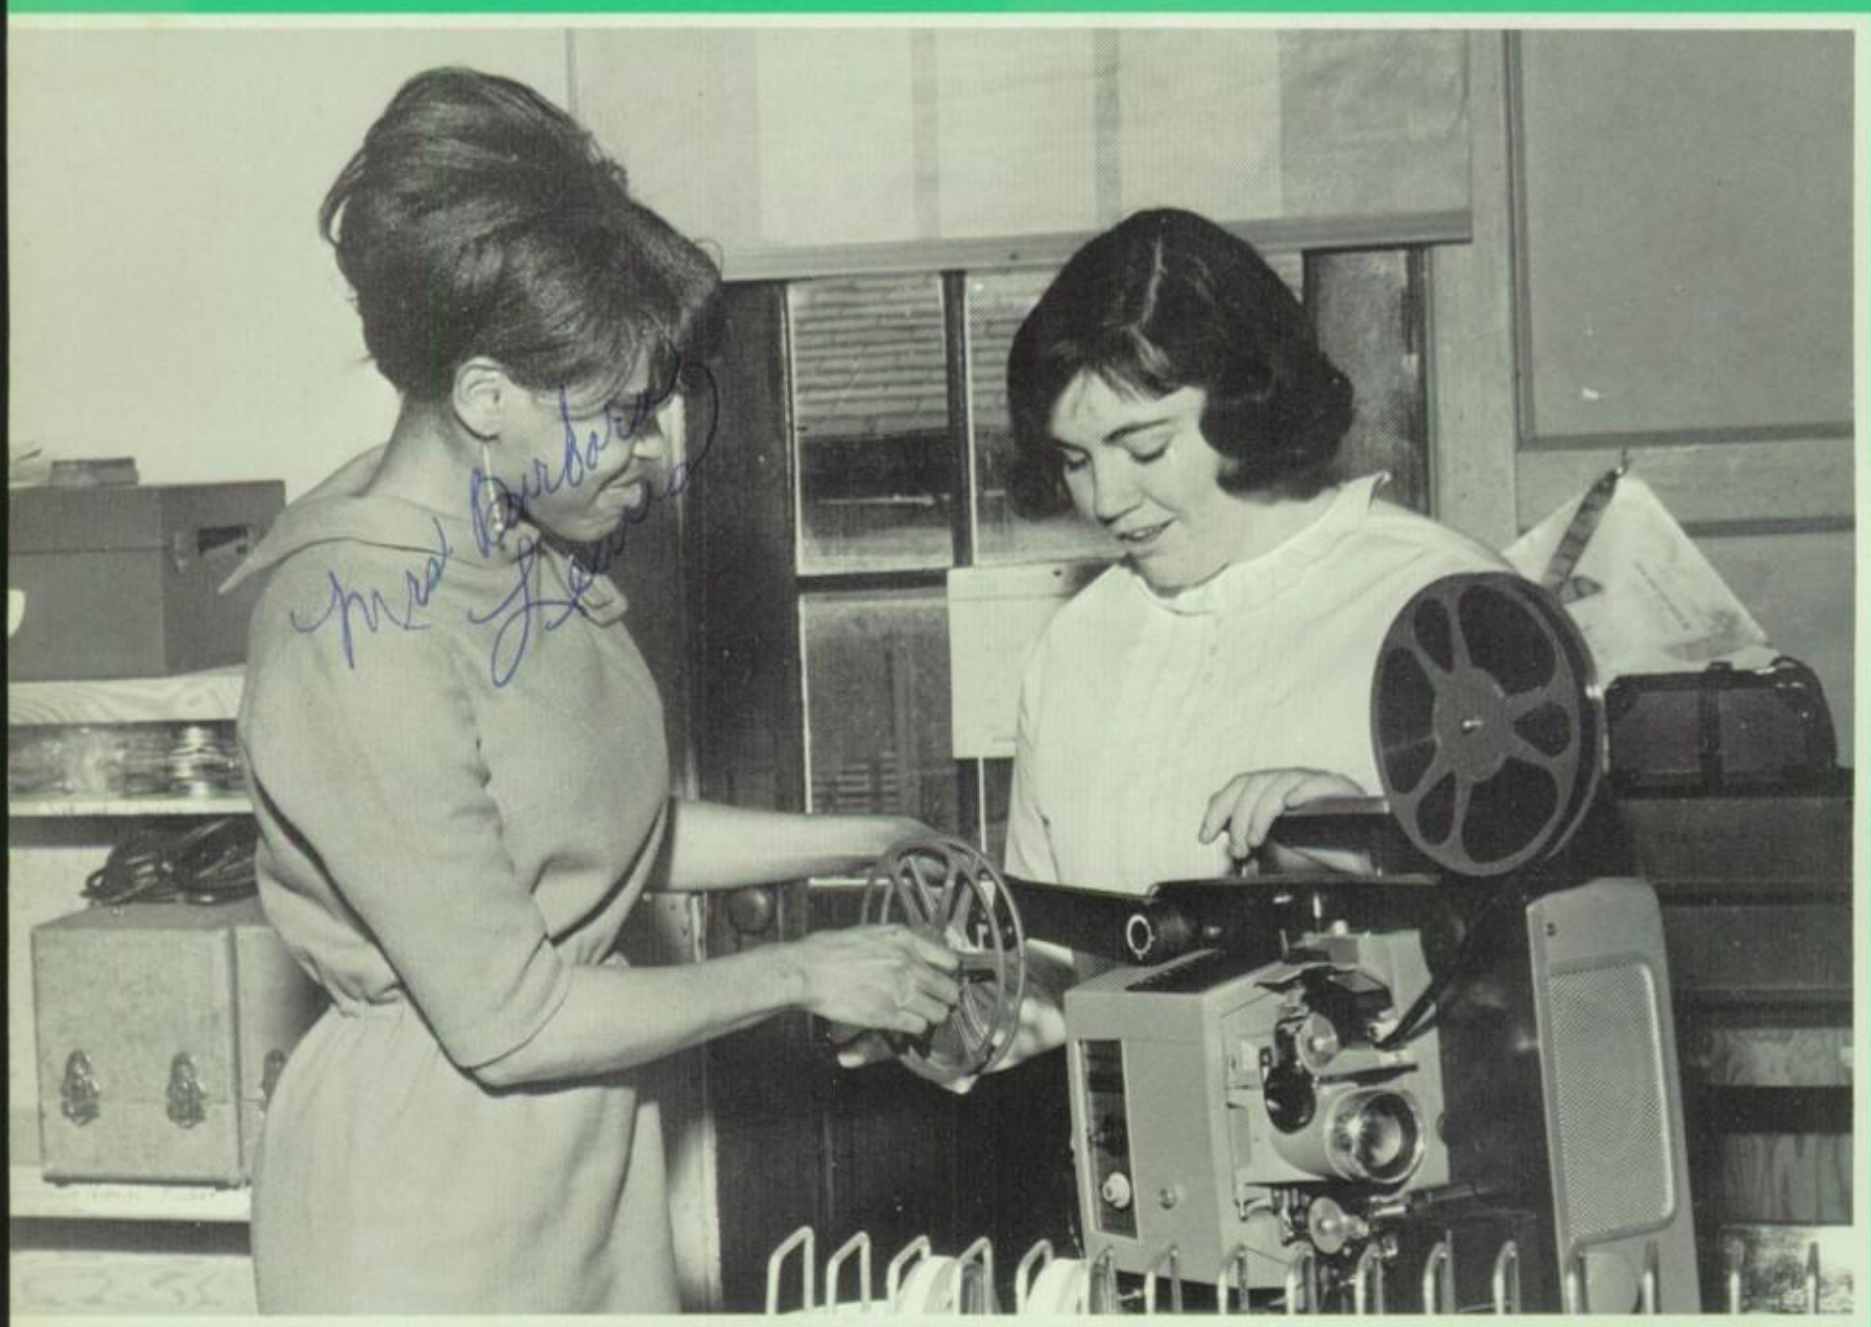
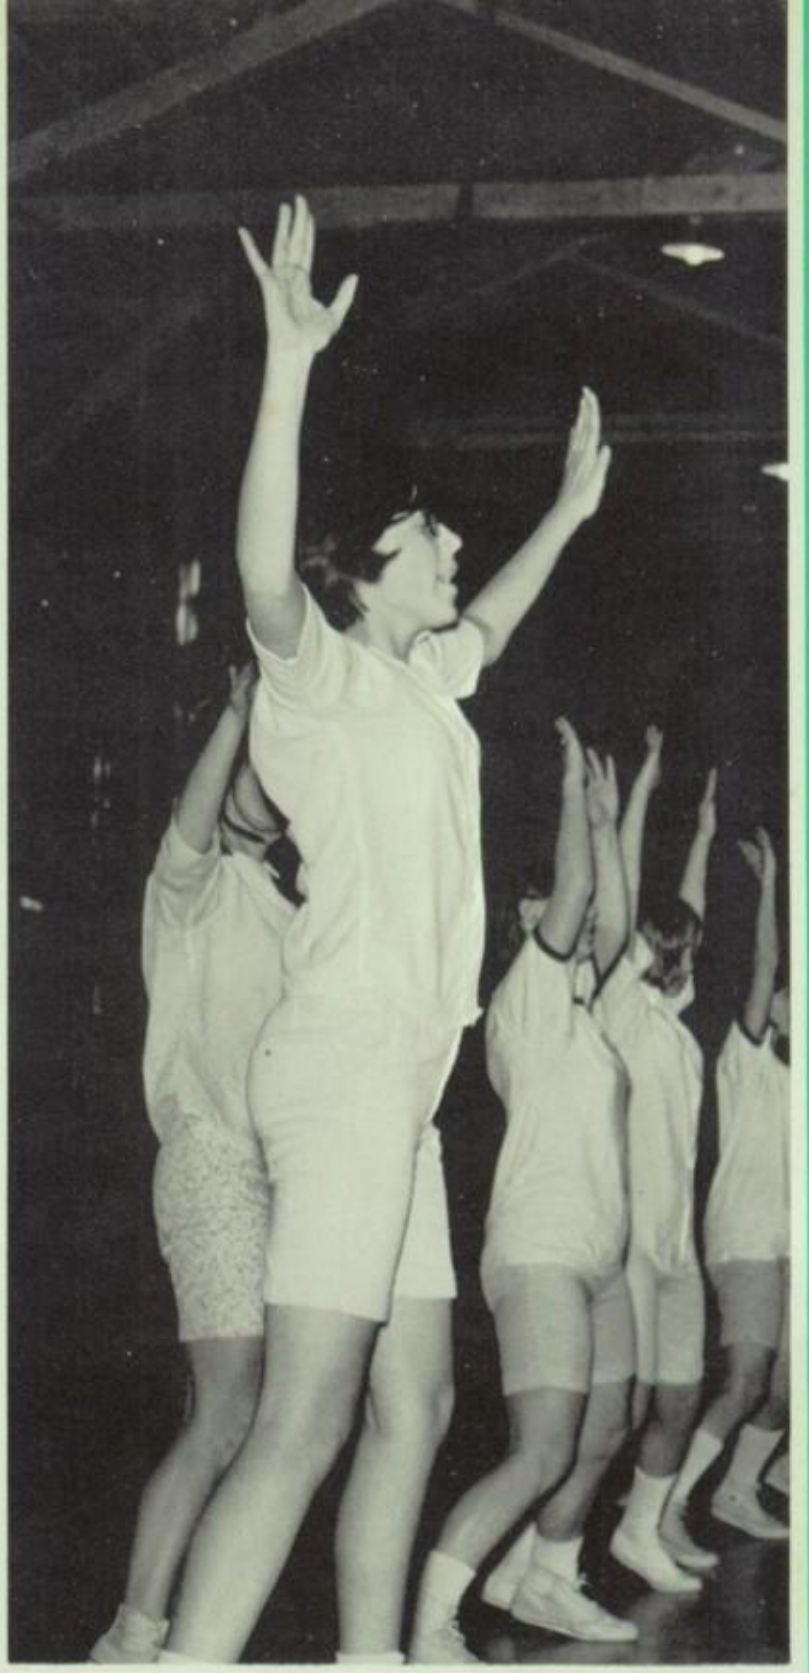
. . . Through Development

Through development of mind, body, and spirit, one is molded into a person having certain traits that will be associated with him throughout his life. Hopefully, such qualities as honesty and high ideals will be attained through the evolution of a person during his gradual maturing. Through parental guidance and sincere concern of the faculty, the awkward period of adolescence is somehow made less difficult, and we find ourselves better prepared for, and more receptive to, future development

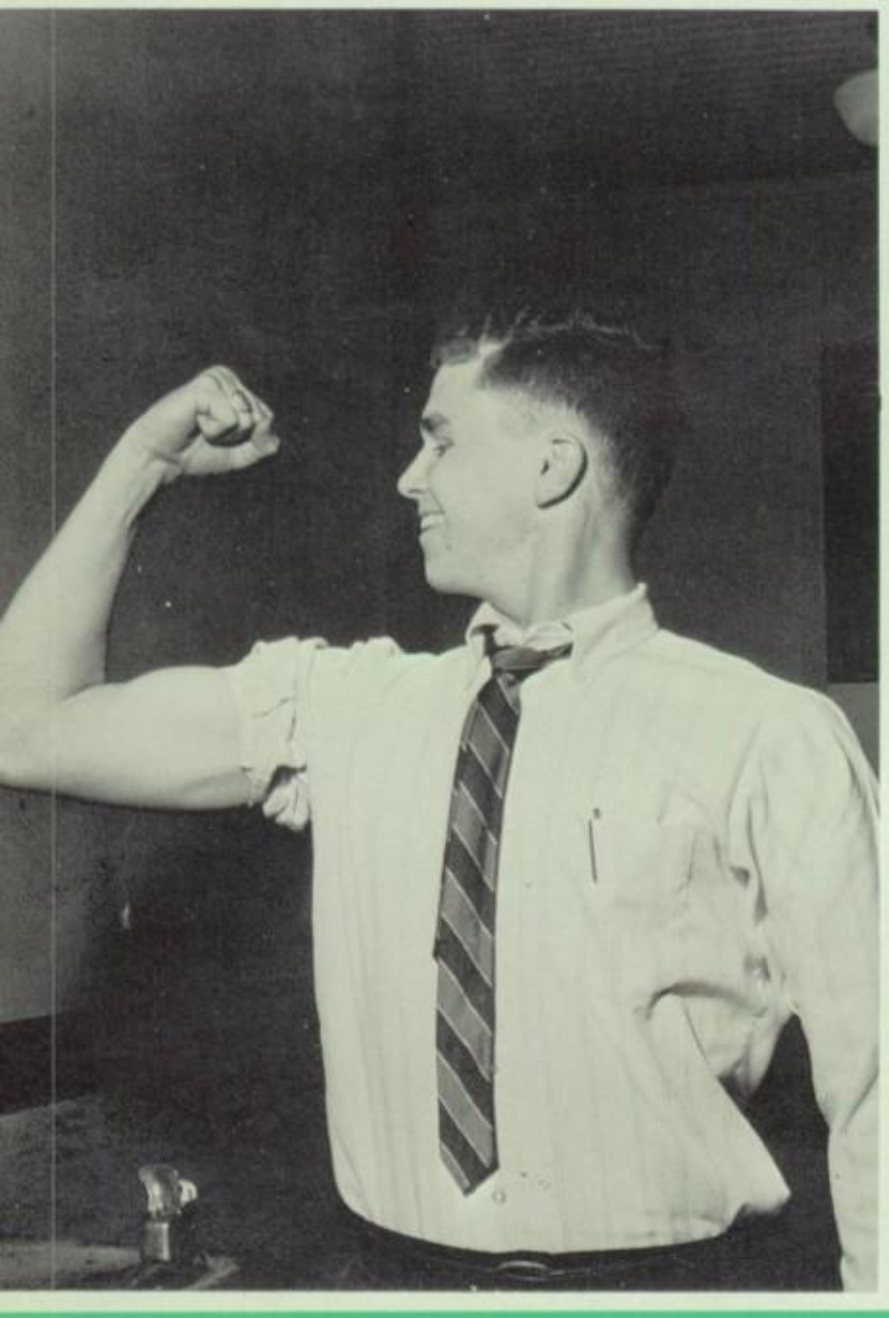


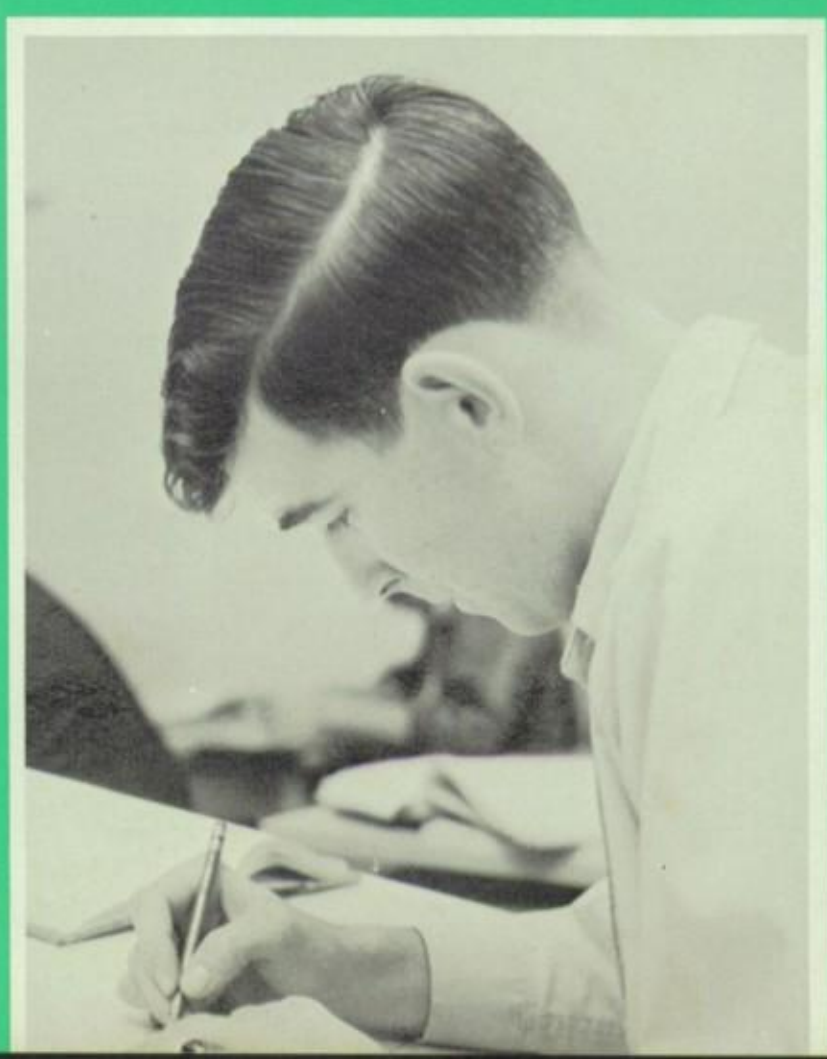
Mrs. Lewis tries to develop in the students a useful knowledge of the operation and application of our audio-visual equipment.

Development of the body is a must if one is to withstand the stress and strain of day-to-day living.



Physical development is nothing to be ashamed of, for it is a sign of hard work and determination.

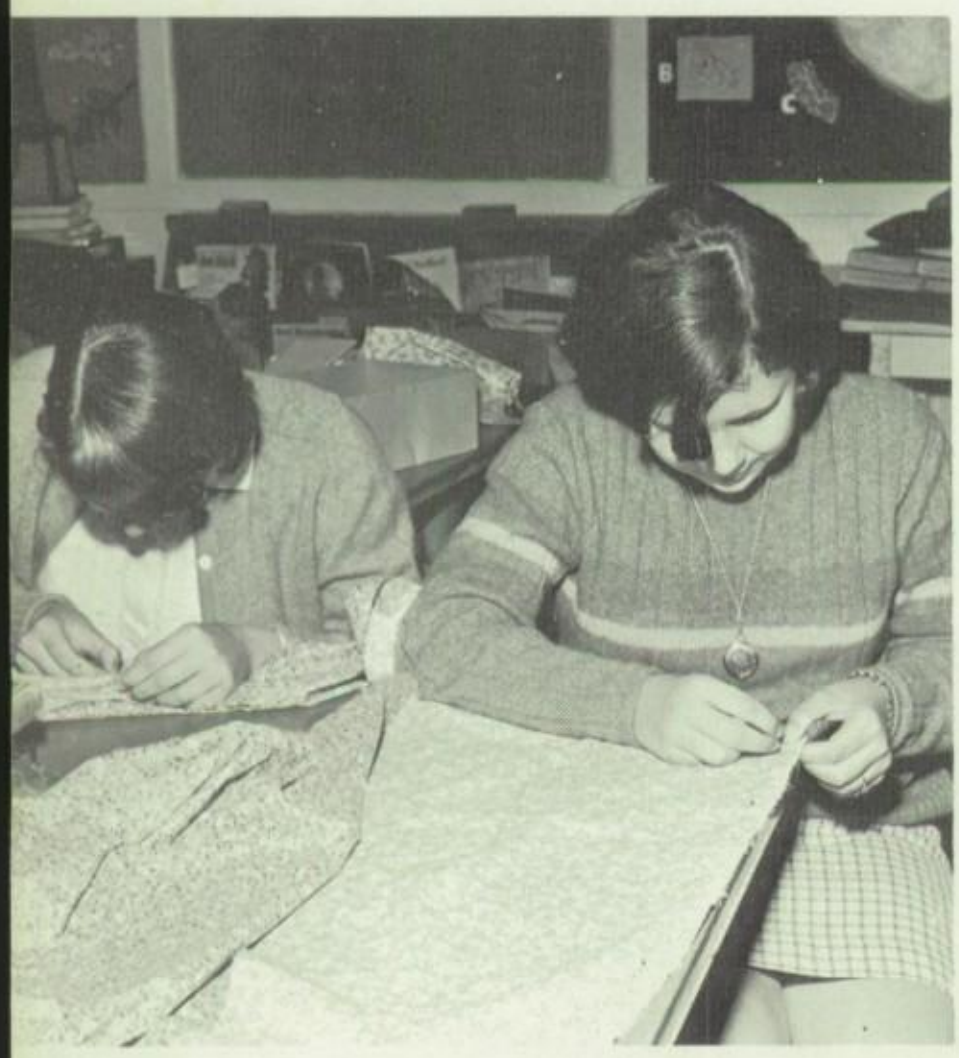




Drafting develops a skill all of its own.

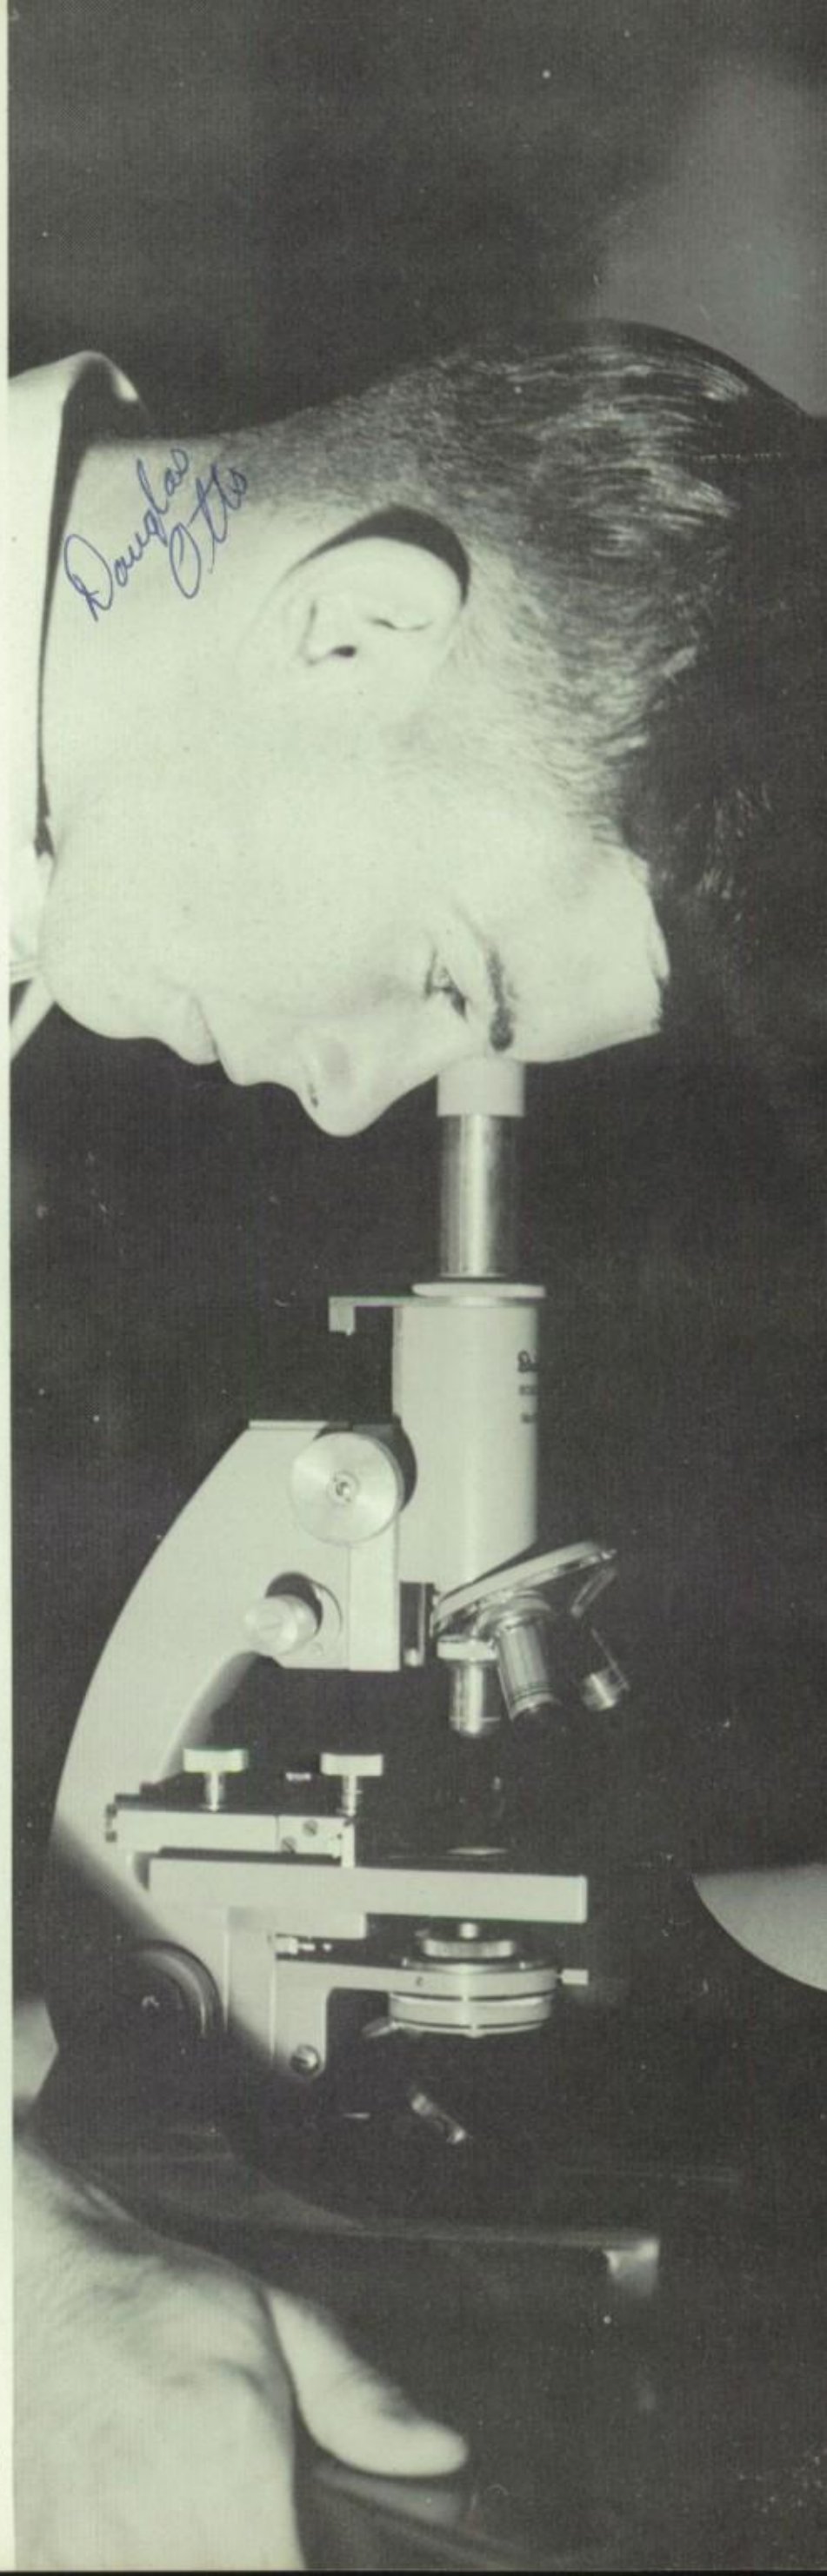
. . . through Experiment

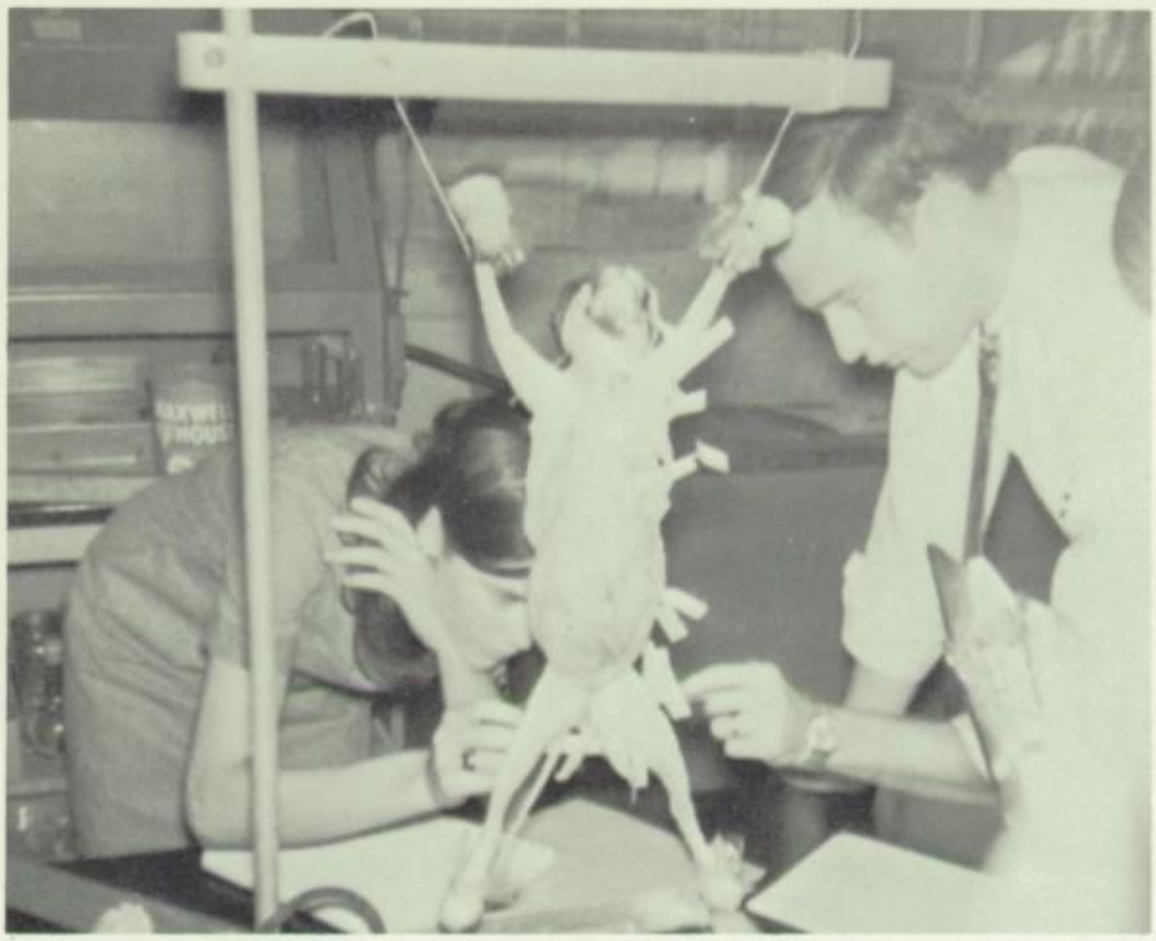
Experiments are trial and error devices that lead to the solutions of life's problems. These devices present challenges to anyone who will accept them. The history of our nation is made up of challenges that were accepted by men who had determination, men who worked diligently with their experiments and did not give up until victory was theirs. Having benefited from their experiments, it is now our duty to continue the work which they began, work which will open new doors for the future. To do this we must constantly strive to discover the unknown, seek new truths, and encourage progress.



Experimentation like this probably results in many of the latest fashions!

Scientists of the future will come from experiments of today.





There's more than one way to skin a cat, as this class found out!

Many of our experiments at Central have often produced some satisfying results.

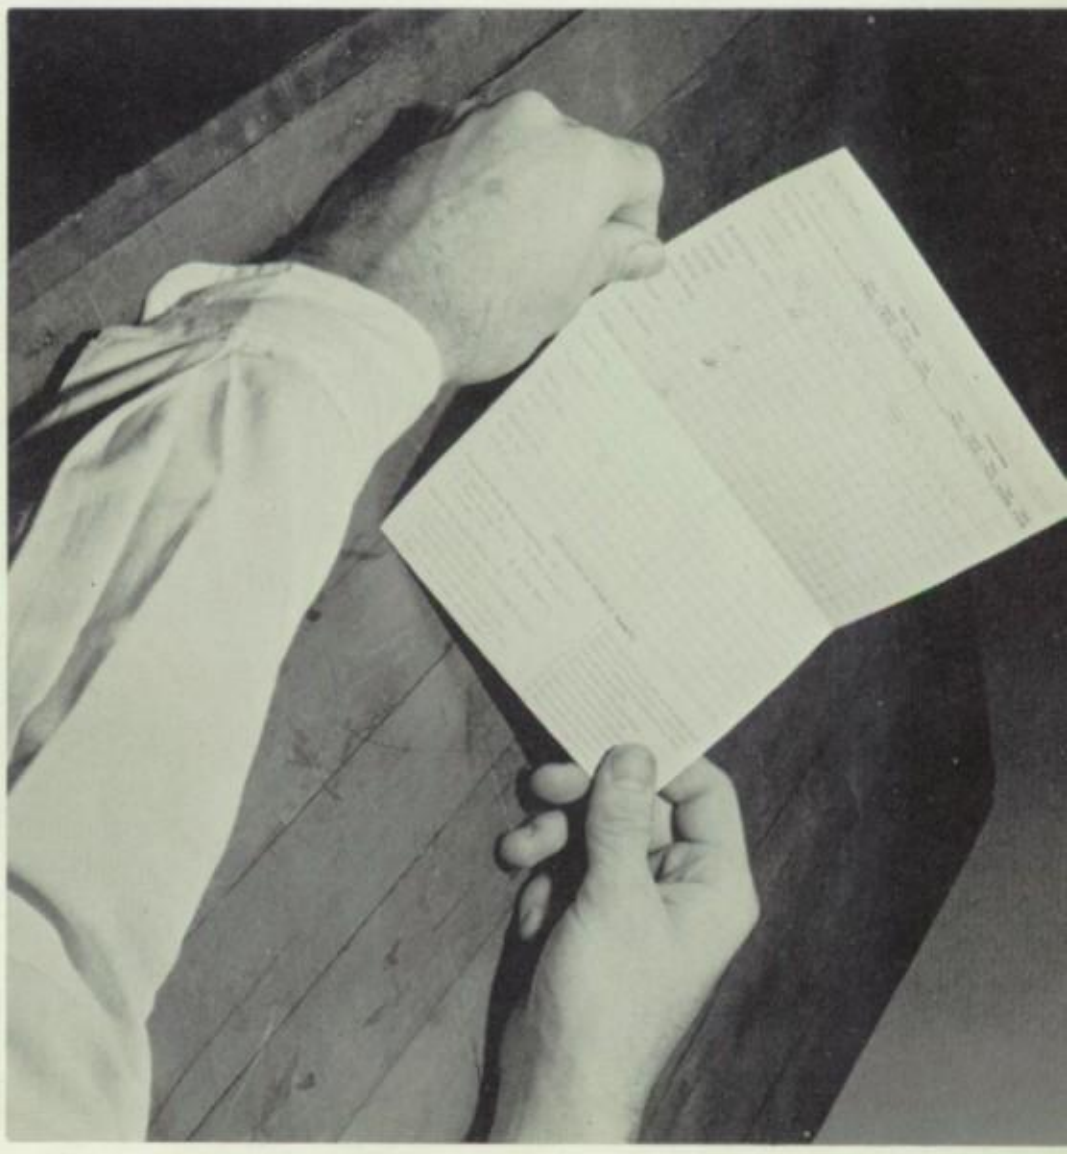
. . . through Achievement

Achievement is that which is ultimate in life- - - - - the knowledge that dreams are no longer dreams, but reality. It is the clear consciousness that personal time and effort have transformed a fleeting fancy into a tangible truth. Setting a goal and reaching it develops a unique strength of character through endurance and pride. Achievement's price seems high when a goal is set, but once attained, it handsomely compensates for all the long hours and hard work of which it is made.

Scoring those free shots may prove to mean victory.

Achievement.

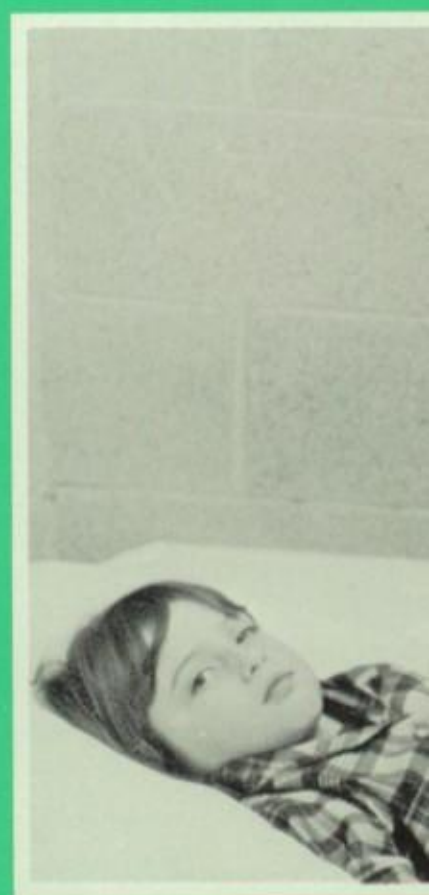
Winning the title of Homecoming Queen brings much happiness.



Certainly this means achievement.

. . . through Leadership

There are qualities of leadership in every person; they wait only to be discovered and used by the individual. In the jump of the cheerleader as well as the rap of a club president's gavel, are forces of ingenuity, enthusiasm, and responsibility which combine to raise a leader from the least of men. The great leader is the one who recognizes his own ability and uses it to point the way for others.



Our cheerleaders are probably the most energetic and enthusiastic leaders on campus.

Leadership can be found in many places as these two early birds prove.

Mrs. Meads helps students when they are sick.

All great leaders must rest occasionally.

. . . through Enjoyment

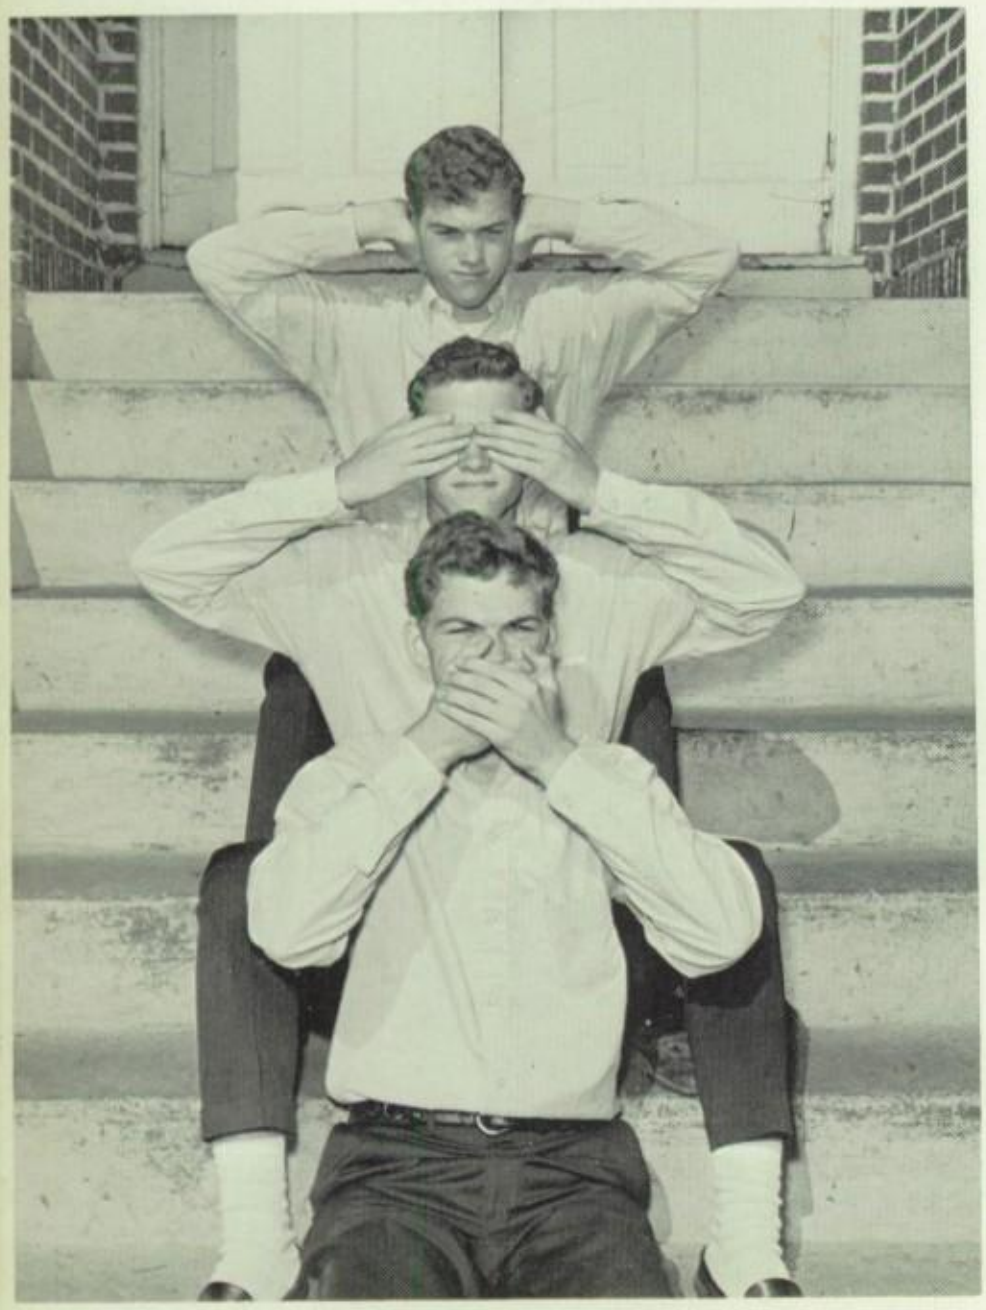
In many instances he who gives the most enjoyment is also the one who receives the most in return. Perhaps this is because he finds enjoyment in the purpose which he pursues. Most often enjoyment can be found in the satisfaction of giving one's best, no matter how it may measure up to someone else's best. Many times the small everyday opportunities for service add up to a constant kind of enjoyment which is passed over without true appreciation. The person who is able to find pleasure in achieving his best, developing himself in many areas, experimenting to find the answers, and leading himself and others on to new ideas is an inspiration to others and brings enjoyment to himself as well as to his associates.

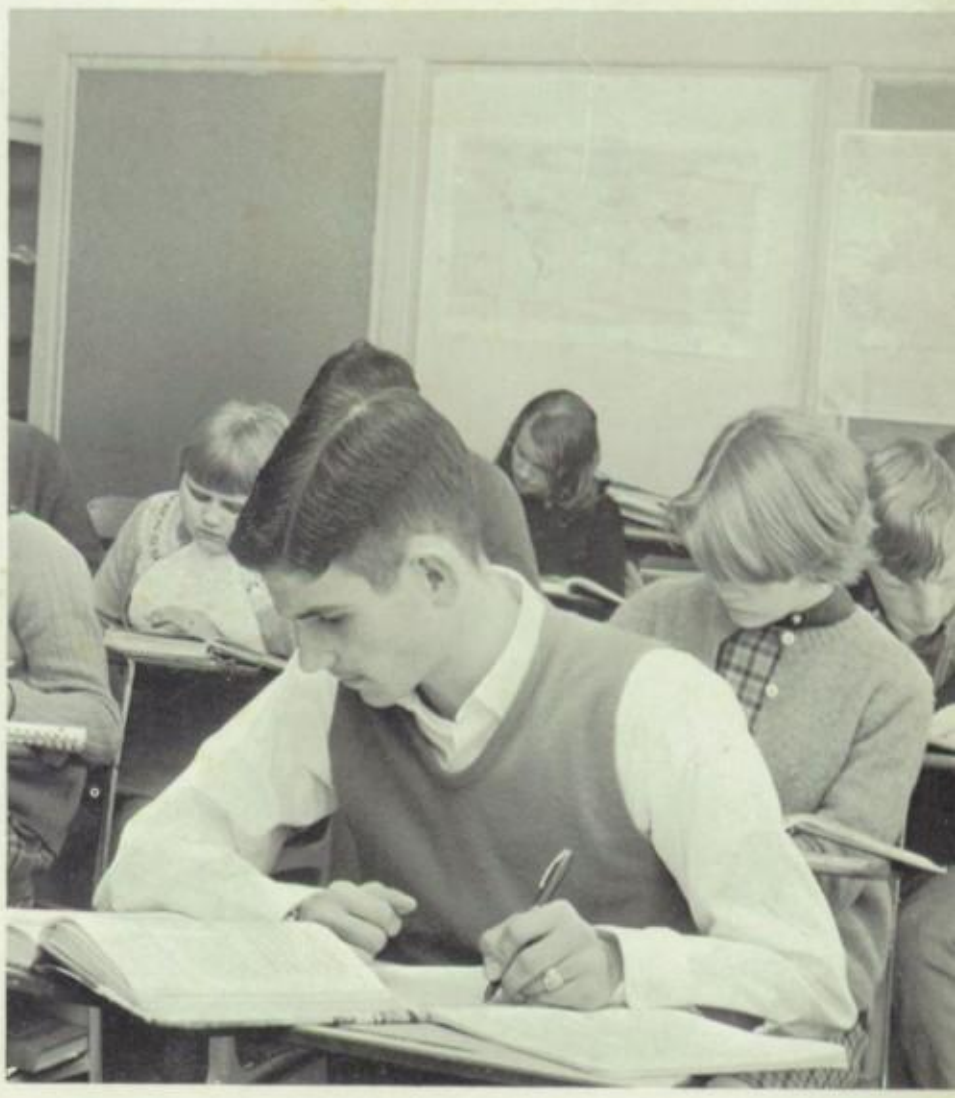
Enjoyment can be sophisticated and form



There's no telling what these three are up to!

while at the same time wild and untamed.

This is the biggest ever!



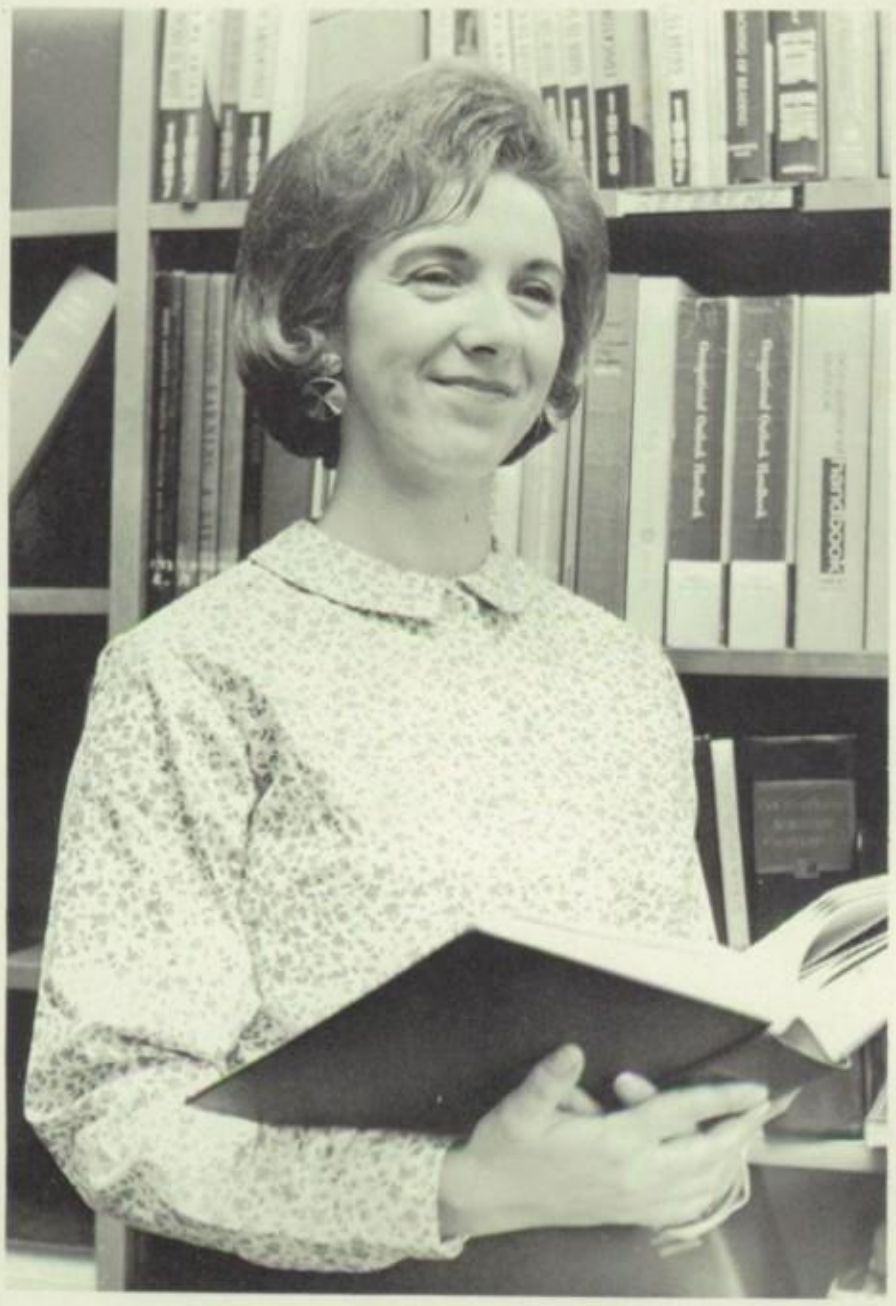
Enjoyment can be expressed in many ways.

Dedication

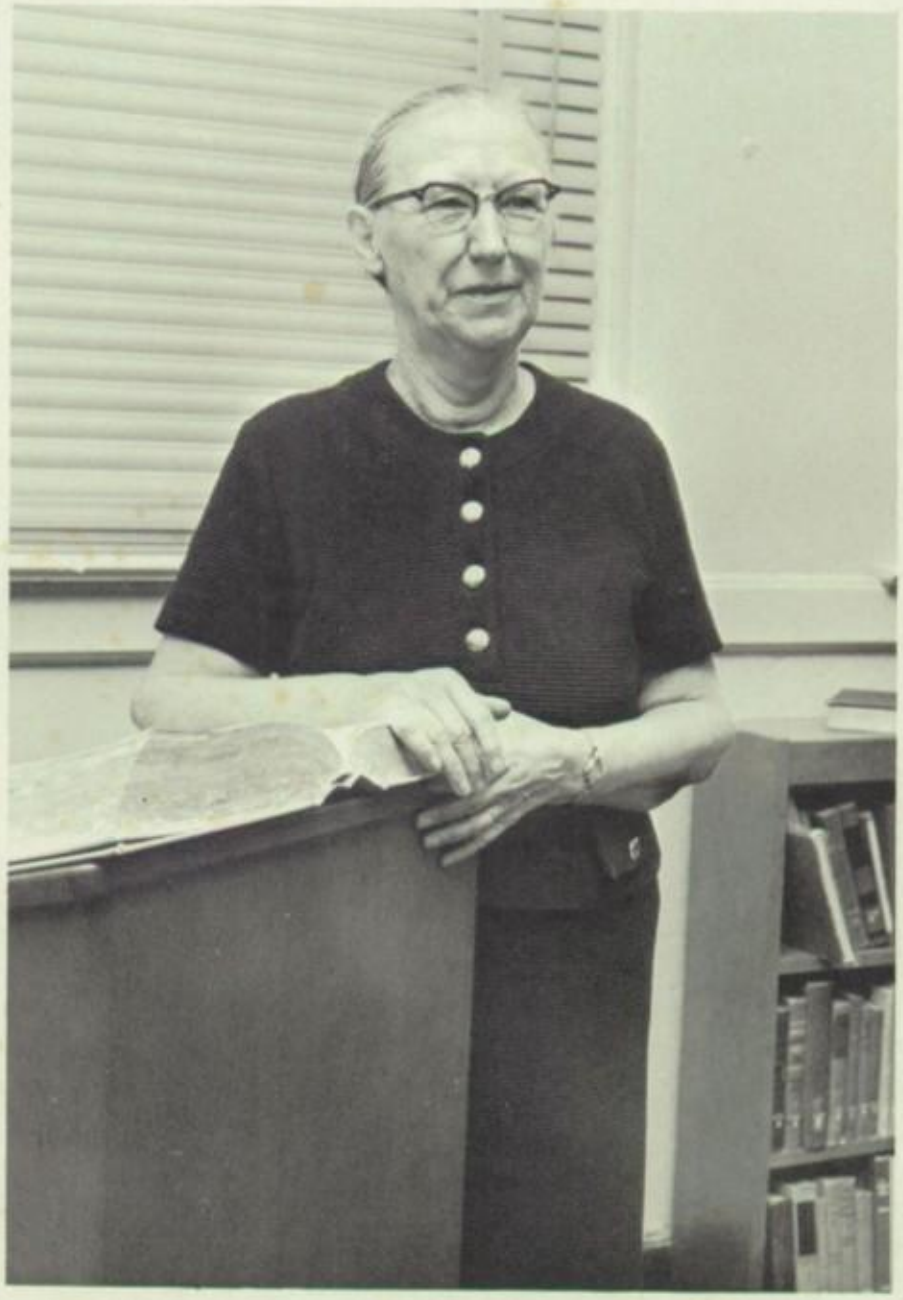
"The highest distinction is service to others."—Truly this distinguished friend and teacher has conscientiously devoted her time and energy to the development of Central High. By instilling in each of us an enthusiasm and desire to achieve, she has provided an energetic leadership that has been an inspiration to each of us. As an expression of our deep appreciation for your unceasing help and many kind acts we proudly dedicate the 1968 BREAKER to you.

Mrs. Ann Reid

A Special Thanks to Our Sponsors



Constantly aiming for improvement, Mrs. Dunn has carried the lead and always made the impossible possible. Her unfaltering efforts have reached far beyond the call of duty with countless hours of service to benefit each of us, in the classroom and on the Breaker Staff. Through her guidance, interest, and enthusiasm, the Breaker has reached new heights of excellency each year. Because of these and numerous other intangible attributes, she will always be a big part of our dearest memories.



To Mrs. Sharber, our second Breaker Staff advisor, we give our warmest thanks. As a Senior class sponsor, she has been a life saver to many and a friend to all. Through Annual Staff meetings and graduation exercises, she continually brightens our way with her ever-growing enthusiasm and witty ideas. Mrs. Sharber has been a beacon of knowledge at Central for many years, and in deep appreciation, we the 1967-68 Breaker Staff, express our heart-felt gratitude for a job well done.

Memoriam

Build on, and make thy castles high and fair, rising and reaching upward to the skies . . .

Always hold yourself proudly, and reach high, stand tall and walk straight. Make sure the rungs of your ladder to Success are strong and your stepping stones to Eternal happiness are secure. Build your future now, but build it the way you wish, remembering these five ingredients: Experiment, Develpoment, Achievement, Leadership, and Enjoyment. With these you will find it easier to traveling the road to Success.
